

How-to: Turn off the Screens

Introduction

All the screens should be turned off after the service. It is preferred that they are left running until at least 12:45. If you plan to leave before 12:45 you may wish to ask someone else, such as the floor manager, to turn them off for you.

In all cases it is best to turn the screens off while ProPresenter is still running the Welcome Loop, so that you can see when the screens are no longer displaying an image.

The Projector

The main projector can be turned off using the AMX touch screen unit in the same way as they are turned on. They can also be turned off using the remote control kept in the tray on the back right of the projection desk.

The Pillar Screens

The pillar screens can be turned off using the AMX touch screen unit in the same way as they are turned on. They can also be turned off using the remote control kept in the tray on the back right of the projection desk.

The Confidence Monitor

The Confidence Monitor can be turned off using the AMX touch screen unit in the same way as it is turned on. It can also be turned off using the remote control kept in the tray on the back right of the projection desk.

The Reception Screen

At present the reception screen can only be turned off using the remote control kept in the tray on the back right of the projection desk.

The Babies' Room Screen

The babies' room screen can be turned off using AMX touch screen, however the touch screen unit receives no feedback from the screen, and the control is not reliable. This screen should be turned off using the remote control in the babies' room.

Some mums use the babies' room as a relatively private place to breastfeed. Male projectionists should not enter the room while it is still in use. It is often best to ask the floor manager to turn off the babies' room screen when they finally lock up the building after the service.
